Vulnerability to modern slavery
How vulnerable a country’s people are to modern slavery is dependent on a range of factors which reflect the strength of governance, access to basic needs, the level of inequality, disenfranchised groups, and effects of conflict. On a scale of 0 to 100, with 100 being the highest vulnerability to modern slavery, Turkmenistan is rated as 47 and has above average vulnerability for the region. Vulnerability is highest in terms of disenfranchised groups.

Priority Recommendations for the government of Turkmenistan:

1. Immediately end the state-imposed forced labour of citizens by publicly acknowledging the existence of serious human rights violations in the cotton harvest and take immediate steps to end such violations.

2. Initiate fair judicial processes that conform to international standards against government officials found to have forced citizens to work, including in the cotton sector, and hold accountable those found guilty with penalties that reflect the severity of the crime and serve as a deterrent for future crimes.

3. Allow independent journalists, human rights defenders, and other individuals and organizations to document and report concerns about the use of forced labour without fear of reprisals. Initiate a time-bound plan to reform root causes of forced labour in the agriculture sector.
